

NURSING MATTERS

100 Years of the UBC School of Nursing

This year marks the 100th anniversary of the UBC School of Nursing. Throughout 2019, the School of Nursing will be celebrating its history as the first to offer a university-based Nursing degree in the British Commonwealth.

To see an overview of the events planned for 2019, view the UBC Nursing Centenary page on the website. Up to the moment details on specific events are listed on the Nursing website events page.

UBC Nursing Profs Top 2018 Media Stories

Media coverage of research led by UBC Nursing professors Dr. Elizabeth Saewyc and Dr. John Oliffe were among the top 10 most read stories from UBC News in 2018.

From eye-opening research about the values of today's young men, to counterintuitive stats about violence between teenage boys and girls, UBC News readers showed an appetite for the unexpected this year:

Millennial men value altruism and self-care above traditional male qualities

Young Canadian men hold masculine values that are distinctly different from those of previous generations, according to a study out of UBC's men's health research program in partnership with a Vancouver-based market research firm. Selflessness, social engagement and health ranked highest, and physical strength ranked lower than either intellectual or emotional strength.

Teen dating violence is down, but boys still report more violence than girls

Boys are more likely than girls to report being the victim of teen-dating violence such as being hit, slapped, or pushed, according to research from UBC's School of Nursing and Simon Fraser University. The research shows that anti-violence interventions should not assume that girls are always the victims.
